NOCS REWARD ARTISTIC EXPRESSION WITH 2014 IOC TROPHY

AWARD RECOGNISES ARTISTS WHO HAVE PROMOTED OLYMPISM

Above Mojmír Vychodil won the Slovak Olympic Committee's 2014 IOC Trophy for designing its National Olympians Memorial

National Olympic Committees around the world have been awarding the 2014 IOC Trophy under the theme of sport and art. Since 1985, the IOC has awarded an IOC trophy each year with a different topical theme, chosen by the IOC President. This trophy is made available to each NOC, which is responsible for identifying and selecting the trophy recipient in its own country. This year, the IOC chose to reward artistic expression. A total of 41 NOCs have recognised artists and creators who have promoted Olympism and left a legacy through art. Previous themes have included sport and sustainable development, sport and social responsibility and sport and the fight against doping.
